DARWIN TULIPS FOR MAY FLOWERING

The wonderful gain in popularity of these "grandest of all tulips," has been entirely upon their merits. The egg-shaped flowers are of large size and are borne on unusually long stems. The brilliant colors range from white through all the shades of pink and purples to the most fiery scarlets, and on the inside the base coloring is of indescribable beauty. Pure yellows are absent in this class yet Gesneriana Lutea may well be used with them for it blooms during the same period. Darwins are in their prime from May 15th to 30th, when other flowers are scarce. Planted in the herbaceous border where they may be left undisturbed in the ground to multiply for at least three years, they reach their full glory.

The list we offer is a choice collection embracing the very cream of the hundreds of sorts in existence and a selection from it is sure to give satisfaction.
